In order to have an effective, inclusive city government, everyone who participates should strive for civil discourse on all matters.
- 2. Respect for the Position: As a legislative body, council authority is collective and no individual councilor has the right to exercise such authority on their own. Councilors have legal authority as a governing body only when the governing body is in session and individual councilors on their own have no legal authority. While all individual members of the council have a right to speak publicly or state their individual opinion verbally or in writing they should never purport to represent the council or a council subcommittee or purport to exercise the authority of the council or a council subcommittee except when specifically authorized by a recorded vote of the council or council subcommittee to do so. Council members who have been granted the authority to speak or state in writing an opinion on behalf of the council or a council subcommittee must support and advocate the official council or council subcommittee position on the issue, and not a personal viewpoint.
- 3. Respect for Colleagues: In all settings individual council members must respect the authority of the council as a collective body and shall make no promises on behalf of the council or to overtly or implicitly promise council action unless authorized to do so. Individual council members shall avoid making personal comments about other council members when speaking or in writing. While it is acceptable to publicly disagree with another council member about an issue, it is unacceptable to make derogatory comments about other council members or their opinions or actions. Once a majority decision of the council has been made, all council members should respect that official position.

- 4. Respect for City Staff. City of Framingham staff serve the entire community and not individual council members and are supervised and report to the Mayor. Council members who interact with City of Framingham staff must do so in a respectful manner and take into consideration that their words and actions can be construed as reflective of the council as a whole. While it is appropriate for a councilor to relay specific constituent concerns related to City services to the appropriate staff members, City of Framingham employees should not be expected to take direction from any individual council member on any matter.
- 5. Respect for other elected officials. Respectful exchanges help create an environment for making sound public decisions. Councilors should approach council meetings and other official forums as an opportunity for a respectful exchange of ideas and avoid “springing surprises” on other elected officials such as bringing up complex matters out of context. If a matter is worth discussion at a council meeting or official forum, it should be on the agenda so that preparation for questions and comments can take place in advance. Any planned action with the intention of embarrassing a colleague in a public setting erodes the “team” approach to governance. Participation and interactions in official meetings should be with the dignity and decorum fitting those who hold a position of public trust.
- 6. Council Appointees: All individuals appointed by the council to serve on subcommittees and other governing bodies should follow policy established by the council including this Code of Conduct. Appointment and re-appointment to a subcommittee or other governing body should be based on criteria such as expertise, ability to work with staff and the public, respectful interactions with others and a commitment to fulfilling official duties. Being respectful of diverse opinions is a primary role of council appointees. Individuals who display disrespectful, abusive and threatening language and behavior in whatever form (written, electronic, spoken or visual including online communications) are exempt from serving in this capacity.
